

Repeabe and an historical document, it is a record of living and learning.

In an attempt to capture the vitality which must characterize education if it is to be effective, we have here departed from the more formal, traditional methods of presentation. Without apology, even with a little price we offer this book as a cross-section of the educative living at ISNU which transmutes prohime into competent teacher.

Observations more than books, experience rather than persons, are the prime educators.

within the veins of printed pages man has left his learning for those who follow, that with it they might build anew. In the library, the Classroom, the dormitory, the rooming house, even as they eat, students can be found tapping the lode for that most precious of ores, knowledge.

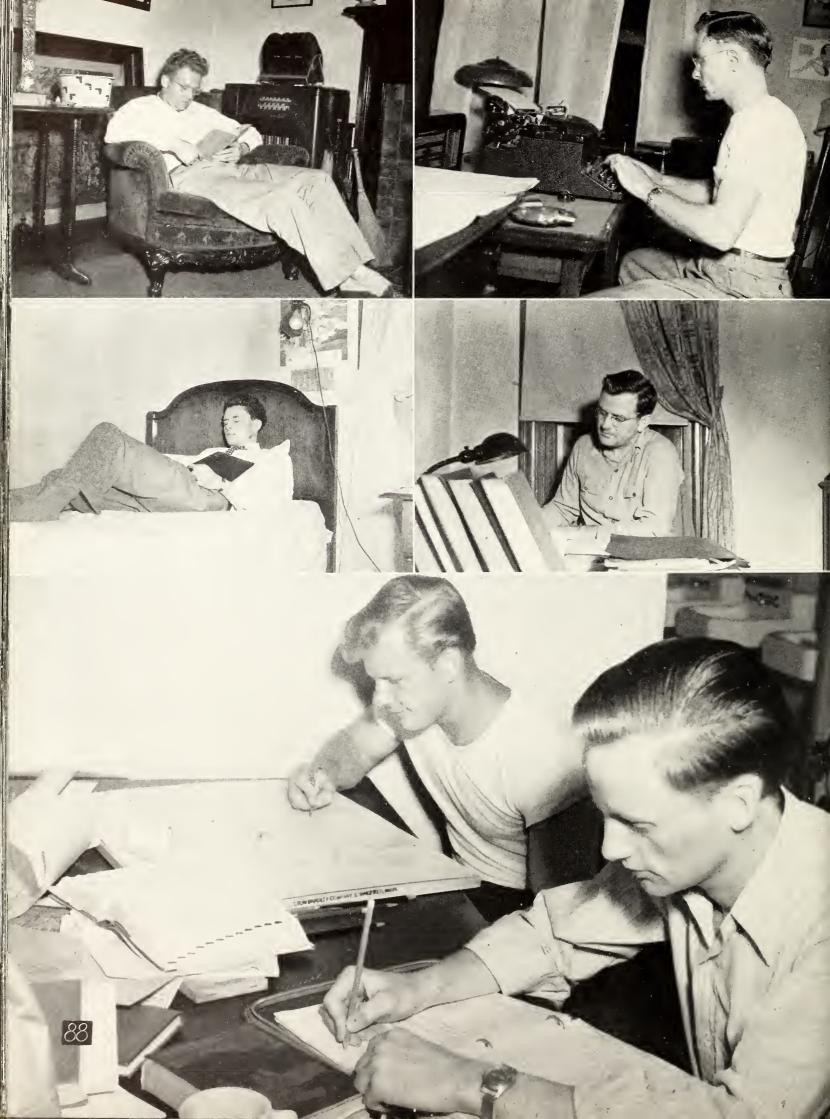

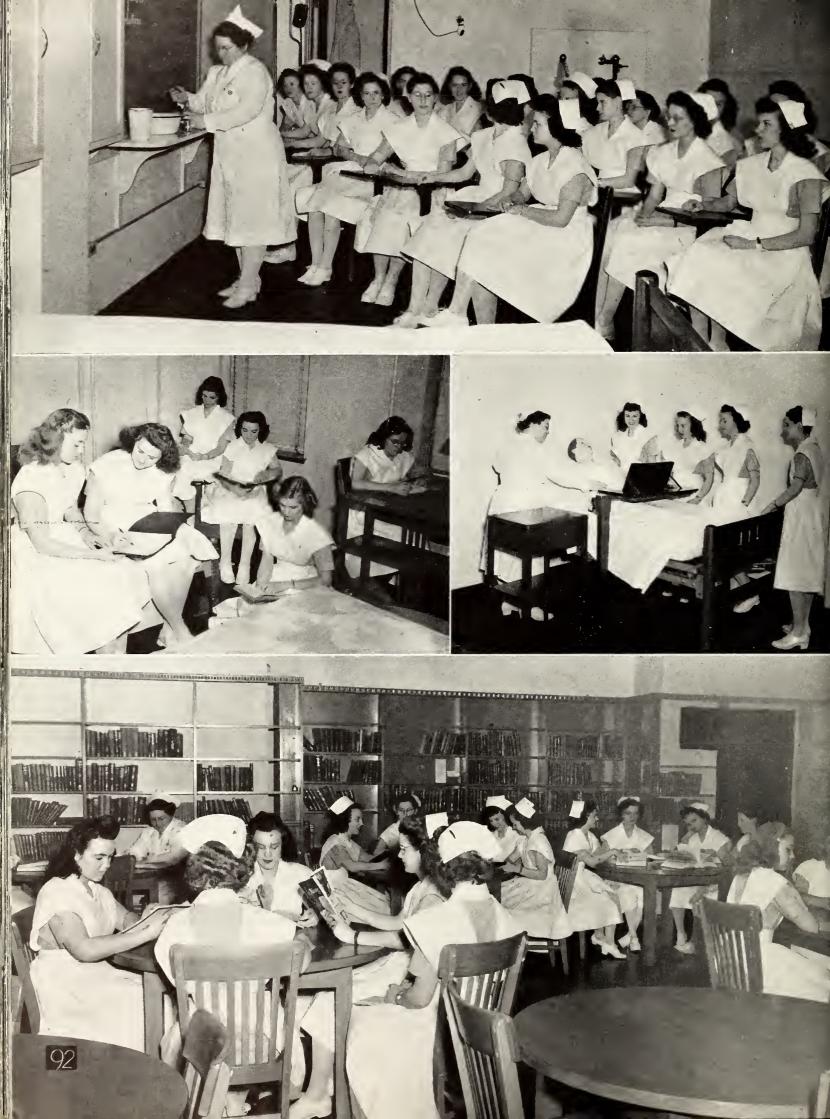

Participation in college athletics i two-fold in nature: active and passive. The player learns the strenger of coordination, the power of teamwork Watching the contests, the audience learn the patterns of Cooperation, gets to know the thrill of vicarious participation, experiences which can be transferred to more vital individual growth in intermural athletics.

NOTE: In order to facilitate the identification of persons in the preceding pages a double indexing system is here presented: first a page by page tabulation of identifiable faces; then on alphabetical list of the student body, with the number of the page on which a person's picture can be found following his name.

It should be possible to find familiar faces by looking through the pages of pictures, by checking with the alphabetical list, by check ing in the page by page index, or through a combination of these methods.

Pictures not accredited to a specific photoaropher are the work of staff photographer, H. Lee Rhodus. Layout is by E. A. Anderson. Unless otherwise indicated, the identification of people will be from left to right. Only clearly recognizable faces are recorded. You moy write in names of others where you recognize them.
